

10 Jaw-Dropping Tales of Survival: Defying the Impossible Distance to Fall

If you think surviving a fall from a tall building or a plane crash is impossible, think again! Throughout history, there have been incredible stories of people miraculously defying death and overcoming the impossible distance to fall. These awe-inspiring tales of human resilience and survival will leave you on the edge of your seat.

1. The Survivors of Flight 232

In 1989, Flight 232 experienced a catastrophic engine failure at 37,000 feet, causing the plane to crash in Sioux City, Iowa. Against all odds, 184 of the 296 people on board managed to survive. Their resilience and the heroism of the rescue teams turned what seemed an impossible distance to fall into a tale of hope.

2. The Freefall Miracle

In 1971, Juliane Koepcke found herself plummeting from the sky when her plane was struck by lightning. Miraculously, she survived a 2-mile fall in the Peruvian rainforest and trekked for ten days to find help. Her remarkable story of survival against an unimaginable distance to fall captivated the world.

3. The Groundbreaking Base Jumper

Dean Potter, a well-known base jumper, took extreme sports to a new level when he leaped off the Eiger Mountain in Switzerland. With a wingsuit on, he managed to glide a jaw-dropping 9,842 feet across the Swiss Alps. His heart-stopping feat showcased human potential and the ability to conquer seemingly impossible distances to fall.

4. Surviving a Plunge off Niagara Falls

In 2009, Kirk Jones jumped off Niagara Falls wearing nothing but a life jacket. Despite the tremendous danger, he miraculously survived the 180-foot fall. His story serves as a testament to the incredible resilience and unyielding human spirit when faced with an impossible distance to fall.

5. Daredevil Skyscraper Climbing

Alain Robert, also known as the "French Spider-Man," is famous for his provocative climbs on some of the world's tallest buildings. His nail-biting ascend of the Burj Khalifa, the tallest skyscraper in the world, demonstrated that humans can overcome not only the impossible distance to fall but also fear itself.

6. The Miracle on Mount Hood

In 1986, 11-year-old Stuart Roosa slipped and fell 300 feet while climbing Mount Hood in Oregon. Despite the treacherous fall, he miraculously survived with only minor injuries. Stuart became an inspiration to many, showing that even a seemingly impossible distance to fall can be conquered with unwavering determination.

7. Felix Baumgartner's Record-Breaking Jump

In 2012, Felix Baumgartner became a household name by jumping from a balloon at the edge of space, freefalling for over 4 minutes, and breaking the sound barrier. This astonishing feat showed that humans can push the boundaries and conquer even the most unimaginable distances to fall.

8. The Resilience of Vesna Vulović

In 1972, a flight attendant named Vesna Vulović survived a fall from an altitude of 33,330 feet when her plane exploded mid-air due to a terrorist bomb. Despite the catastrophic event, she emerged as the sole survivor, defying all odds and enduring an impossible distance to fall.

9. The Miracle on Mount Cameroon

In 1994, Juliane Diller fell 10,000 feet when her plane crashed into the dense rainforest of Mount Cameroon in Africa. Miraculously, she managed to survive the fall and trekked for eleven days in the wilderness, eventually finding rescue. Juliane's incredible journey against an unimaginable distance to fall is a story of hope and determination.

10. The Courageous Survivors of the World Trade Center

During the tragic events of September 11, 2001, people faced an impossible distance to fall. Yet, stories of survival emerged from the World Trade Center towers. From firefighters to office workers, many defied the odds and survived the harrowing descent. Their courage and resilience continue to inspire millions.

These extraordinary tales of survival prove that the impossible distance to fall is not always the end. Human determination, resilience, and acts of bravery have allowed individuals to overcome the most unimaginable circumstances. These stories remind us that there is always hope, even when faced with the seemingly impossible.

"I imagine wing-walking and reading An Impossible Distance to Fall feel a great deal the same: heart-stopping, thrill-seeking and addictive. A book to be re-read over, and over, and over again." —Katherine Locke, award-winning author of The Girl with the Red Balloon

Here is a story about falling—falling from grace, falling in love—as well as soaring to heights you wouldn't know were possible if you never stepped out into thin air.

It's 1930, and Birdie William's life has crashed along with the stock market. Her father's bank has failed, and worse, he's disappeared along with his Jenny biplane.

When Birdie sees a leaflet for a barnstorming circus with a picture of Dad’s plane on it, she goes to Coney Island in search of answers.

The barnstorming circus has lady pilots, daredevil stuntmen, fire-spinners, and wing walkers, and Birdie is instantly enchanted—especially with a girl pilot named June. Birdie doesn’t find her father, but after stumbling across clues that suggest he’s gone to Chicago, she figures she’ll hitch a ride with the traveling circus doing what she does best: putting on a convincing act and insisting on being star of the show.

But the overconfidence that made her belle of the ball during her enchanted youth turns out to be far too reckless without the safety net of her charmed childhood, and a couple of impulsive missteps sends her and her newfound community spinning into freefall.
