It merges the thrill of solving a crime with the calming and serene hobby of observing and appreciating birds.

Birder murder mysteries can take place in a variety of settings, from bustling cities to remote forests and everything in between. They allow readers to explore different birding habitats and encounter a wide range of species, both common and exotic. Whether a murder occurs in the midst of a bird-watching tour or a suspect's behavior raises suspicion among fellow enthusiasts, these stories never fail to showcase the intricate relationship between humans and birds.

The Main Character: The Birder Detective

At the heart of every birder murder mystery is the protagonist, the birder detective. This amateur sleuth is not your typical crime-solving professional. Instead, they are an avid birdwatcher blessed with sharp observation skills and an astute understanding of bird behavior. Their love for birds drives them to delve deeper into the murder mystery, unearthing crucial clues hidden in feathers, birdcalls, and nests.

The birder detective's unique perspective adds a fresh dimension to the murder investigation. With an immense knowledge of birds, they can interpret the slightest bird-related details and connect them to the bigger picture of the crime. Their deep appreciation for nature and the environment also serves as a driving force to bring the murderer to justice, intertwining the narrative with elements of conservation and the protection of avian life.

The Twist: Environmental Crimes

While uncovering the truth behind the murder, birder detectives often stumble upon environmental crimes that pose a threat to bird habitats. This adds an extra layer of complexity to the narrative and raises awareness about the challenges faced by avian species in the real world. From illegal poaching and habitat destruction to chemical pollution, the stories shed light on the pressing environmental issues that affect the birds we admire.

Book 4 in Steve Burrows's gripping Birder Murder mystery series

Chief Inspector Domenic Jejeune hopes an overseas birding trip will hold some clues to solving his fugitive brother's manslaughter case. Meanwhile, in Jejeune's absence his long-time nemesis has been drafted in as cover to investigate an accountant's murder. And unfortunately Marvin Laraby proves just a bit too effective in showing how an investigation should be handled.

With the manslaughter case poised to claim another victim, Jejeune learns an accident back home in Britain involving his girlfriend, Lindy, is much more than it seems. Lindy is in grave danger, and she needs Jejeune. Soon, he is faced with a further dilemma. He can speak up on a secret he has discovered relating to Laraby's case, knowing it will cost his job on the north Norfolk coast he loves. Or he can stay silent, and let a killer escape justice. Turns out that sometimes the wrong choice is the only one there is.
