Emily's father has been fired. They are being forced to leave Fox Run and everything she loves behind. Her friends, her peers and her trainers. All she'll take with her are her horses and her will to survive and win at all costs but it's a blow to everything she's worked so hard for and a setback she never saw coming.

Now Emily and her father will set up residence at his falling down farm where there is no ring and the barn is only half finished. She'll have to train without all the luxuries she's become so accustomed to. No grooms. No jumps. No one to care. And no Socks because despite Missy's promises, he has to stay behind at Fox Run. Missy has betrayed them all, a woman scorned, out for revenge and now Emily is stuck in the middle.

But when life pulls the rug out from under you there is nothing to do but keep going. Emily knows she will never give up on her dream. She'll just have to work a little harder to get there. She's done it before and she'll do it again. And she doesn't need fancy facilities to put her horses into an intensive training program to figure out who will replace Socks as her ride on the Junior Olympic team because the first show is in December and she only has one month to get her horses back into the best shape of their life.
