Strong and feisty Adairia Fairbairn sets off from her small Scottish fishing village in the hopes of starting an exciting new life in America. Little does she know what is in store for her before she even arrives at the mountain top village of Pine Top, Montana.

As a mail-order bride, she is hoping for her own Christmas miracle in the man she has been corresponding with but trouble strikes when the stagecoach she is traveling in is attacked by thieves.

Along with Adam Kinworthy, she helps fight off the raiders, but not before they have stolen the bank money and all of the townsfolk's Christmas gifts.

Adam is angry yet he can't help but be pulled in by this beautiful, red-haired Scottish girl, dressed all in red tartan.

Adairia can't deny she is attracted to Adam - how can she not be with his handsome good looks, but Adairia must temper down her feelings, after all, she is all but engaged to another man, isn't she?

Will Adaria find the love of a good man that she so desperately craves?

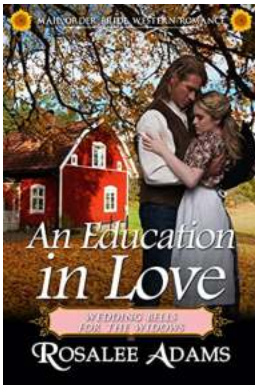

Can Adam get her back to safety and, when finally there, allow his feelings for her to become more than just a dream?
