A woman desperate to feel love for the first time in her life...

A man hiding from the world with a deep, dark secret buried deep within him...

Two hearts, torn apart by doubt, hurt, and misunderstanding...

Mail Order Bride, Louisa Fitzgerald, travels from her native Vermont to marry Nebraskan farmer, Jason Alden. However, a part of Louisa is saddened by the idea that she is not destined to wed for true love. Her heart yearns for more than simply a business arrangement.

During the journey out West, she holds onto the hope that Jason might look into her eyes and suddenly feel a rush of passion and fall in love with her, in an instant.

Her hopes are dashed when Jason meets her at the station—to say he is abrupt is a polite way of describing his rudeness.

Life doesn't get much better when he can hardly string two words together to speak to her.

Louisa despairs, surely her life isn't going to be lacking in companionship so close to Christmas?

Can Louisa find a way to break into Jason's heart, despite his icy exterior?

Will Jason tell Louisa what hurts him most, possibly allowing them to build a future together, despite the past?
