The Vivid Imagery of African Poets

AFRICA

*When you have acquired a taste for the dust,
and the scent of our first rain,
You're hooked for life on Africa,
and you'll not be right again.
Until you can watch the setting moon
and hear the jackals bark,
And know they are around you waiting in the dark.*

*When you long to see the elephants
or hear the coucal's song,
When the moonrise sets your blood on fire,
then you've been away too long.
It is time to cut the traces loose,
and let your heart go free,
Beyond that far horizon
where your spirit yearns to be.*

*Africa is waiting – come!
Since you have touched the open sky
And learned to love the rustling grass and the wild fish eagle's cry.
You'll always hunger for the bush;
for the lion's rasping roar,
To camp at last beneath the stars and to be at peace once more.*

The Eternal Beauty of Emily Dickinson's Work

Themes in Dickinson's poetry

A few themes occupied the poet: love, nature, doubt and faith, suffering, death, immortality - these John Donne has called the great granite obsessions of humankind.

- Love: Though she was lonely and isolated, Emily appears to have loved deeply; perhaps only those who have "loved and lost" can love, with an intensity and desire which can never be fulfilled in the reality of the lovers' touch. Examples: #511, 478, 640.
- Nature: A fascination with nature consumed Emily. She summed all her lyrics as "the simple news that nature told," (#441); she loved "nature's creatures" no matter how insignificant - the robin, the hummingbird, the bee, the butterfly, the rat.

Delve into the profound depths of Emily Dickinson's poetry, a collection that explores themes of nature, death, and the human condition with exquisite sensitivity. Dickinson's unique style and remarkable ability to distill profound emotions into concise lines captivate readers to this day. Her work, initially shrouded in obscurity, has since been recognized for its profound insights and groundbreaking use of language. Let Dickinson's verses embrace your soul and transport you to an ethereal realm of beauty and contemplation.
