The Winds of Change: Society in the 18th and 19th Centuries

In the late 18th century, society was marked by inequality, rigid social hierarchies, and limited rights for most individuals. However, as the 19th century unfolded, monumental changes challenged these traditional structures, leading to the gradual rise of democracy, women's rights, and social reforms. Issues such as slavery, labor rights, and industrialization played crucial roles in reshaping societal norms and values during this era.

The Age of Revolutions and the Birth of Modern Politics

Countless political upheavals and revolutions occurred between 1796 and 1926, significantly altering the global political landscape. The American Revolution, French Revolution, and subsequent waves of independence movements in Latin America and Europe transformed the concept of governance, rights, and citizenship. Enlightenment ideals fueled these revolutions, promoting concepts like popular sovereignty, constitutionalism, and individual freedoms.

The Rise of Industrialization and Capitalism

Simultaneously, the advent of the Industrial Revolution unleashed unprecedented economic growth and social change. The of machinery, steam power, and mass production methods revolutionized production processes and created new economic opportunities. Countries shifted from agrarian-based economies to industrial powerhouses, accompanied by urbanization, migration, and social displacement.

From National Perspectives to Global Affairs: International Relations in Transition

As societies and economies evolved, so did the dynamics of international relations. The period from 1796 to 1926 witnessed the rise and fall of empires, the birth of new nations, and the growing interdependence of regions around the world.

The Age of Imperialism and the Partition of Africa

During the 19th and early 20th centuries, European powers engaged in a race for colonies, resulting in the widespread colonization and division of Africa. Imperial expansion not only led to the exploitation of resources but also fueled political tensions among European nations. The scramble for Africa became a turning point in global relations, highlighting the complexities of colonial rule and the struggle for independence.

The Dawn of Globalization and International Organizations

In the early 20th century, the concept of globalization began to take shape, as technological advancements facilitated greater connectivity and communication between nations. International organizations like the League of Nations emerged, aiming to maintain peace, promote cooperation, and resolve conflicts through diplomacy. These developments set the stage for the interconnected world we inhabit today.

The Great Upheavals: Wars, Crises, and Shifts in the 20th Century

The period from 1796 to 1926 saw some of the most significant wars and crises that shaped the 20th century.

The World Wars and the Redrawing of Borders

The world was thrust into chaos with the outbreak of World War I in 1914, followed by the even more devastating World War II in 1939. These conflicts resulted in the redrawing of national boundaries, the collapse of empires, and mass displacement of populations. The League of Nations' failure to prevent another catastrophic war paved the way for the formation of the United Nations, emphasizing the need for international cooperation and conflict resolution.

The Great Depression and its Global Impact

In 1929, the global economy suffered a catastrophic collapse, triggering the Great Depression. This economic downturn had far-reaching consequences, including widespread unemployment, social unrest, and political instability. Governments around the world implemented various economic policies and reforms in an attempt to mitigate the effects of the crisis.

The political economy of Iran underwent the fundamental transition from feudalism to modernity from the early 19th to the 20th century: a period which was a vital watershed in Iran's historical development. This book provides a critical analysis of Iran's economic, social and political development and shows how the path to modernity, far from smooth, was hindered by both internal and international factors. These included a powerful monarchy with little interest in administrative and economic reform, a large aristocracy frequently holding vital provincial governorships and frustrating effective central government and a failure to create a modern civil service, military, banking, finance or communications - the essential infrastructure for economic development. Reformers were marginalised and business suffered. And the all-powerful ulema were a further brake on modernisation. On the international front, the rivalry of Britain and Russia compounded the problems: both acting to control Iran and to further their own interests.

Hooshang Amirahmadi explores the roots of present-day challenges to modernisation and progress and, using a wealth of primary sources and original research, has produced a work which is invaluable for students of modern Iranian history, politics and Iran's political economy.
