What happens when you meet someone who challenges everything you believe in?

Charlie Woodson is the star football player with piercing green eyes, and Jillian Baker is the new girl whose goal is to lay low until graduation. Everyone wants to be near Charlie, to have his attention, but it's clear he would prefer to be alone... except when it comes to Jillian, and everyone wants to know: why?

Jillian and Charlie have endured more loss than anyone should at sixteen and there are two things they both can agree on:

Being alone is better, because then you'll never get hurt.

How they really know each other needs to remain a secret.

But keeping this secret leads to more secrets, and avoiding the truth and their feelings is becoming a lot more complicated.

Can they find happiness between the sadness, or will their fear of losing someone else keep them apart?
