David's perseverance paid off, and not only did he achieve academic success, but he also earned a scholarship to a prestigious university. However, she believed that her past should not dictate her future, and her entrepreneurial spirit paved the way for remarkable achievements. With sheer determination, Emma dedicated herself to mastering business knowledge and skills.

At the age of 24, Emma founded her own social enterprise, providing job opportunities and mentorship for other youth from a foster care background. “I am writing this book to inspire, but I am also writing to entertain. I have designed the paragraphs to be short enough for an easier read and will share some amusing tales to make this worthwhile.

“So this crazy attempt of mine is to inspire you to find your juice: something you are passionate about, someplace that digs out the enthusiasm in you and helps you become better than you ever hoped”

“If Africa hopes to change and catch up with the world, our young people are the hope of that possibility. If we can inspire them to break the barriers and find some inspiration, perhaps a revolution can happen. Not of machetes, guns, and missiles, but of innovation and continent-wide transformation.”

This book is not an experiment! It is a collection of documented experiences about people who have won and continues to do so! It is the agglomeration of HOW to WIN presented through the vehicle of storytelling. It is the ideal prescription for every young person in Africa who is concerned about how to chart a path for themselves in life by building a legacy that will outlast them.

There are 12 chapters representing twelve eternal principles of success. Each chapter epitomises as best as possible a practical think-through of the principle, spiced with its real life application story of at least one or more persons.

This is a great book to read, not just as a weekend carry along, but as a life-readiness tool which can be easily referenced for decision making and lifestyle commitments.
