The Domingo Martinez Paredez Mayan Reader is a translation of five of the major works of Martinez Paredez, a Mayan Indian born in 1904 to a curandera mother. The five books translated are: “Un Continente y Una Cultura” (One Continent and One Culture); “Hunab K’u: Sintesis de Pensamiento Maya” (Hunab K’u: Synthesis of Mayan Philosophical Thought); “ El Idioma Maya Hablado y el Escrito” (The Mayan Language Spoken vs. Written); “El Hombre y el Cosmos en el Mundo Maya” (Man and the Cosmos in the Mayan Worldview); and “El Popol Vuh Tiene Razon” (The Popol Vuh Has Reason).

Martinez Paredes became a philologist who studies languages, and he was fluent in Nahuatl, as well as his native Yucatec Mayan and the K'iche and Kakchiquel Mayan languages of Guatemala. Professor of Mayan Studies at Mexico's national university, the UNAM; his voice was a native voice, with a native perspective, much different than the rest of the academic world which follows the European version. His mastery of the native languages and his culture enabled him to plumb the depth of the meaning of their words, and thus reveal to the modern world how the Mayan and other natives visualized themselves; as part of Mother Nature, subject to her laws, and an integral part of the evolutionary cosmos through the integration of his Father, the Sun. Martinez Paredes thus arguably is the most brilliant philosophical native American author who has published in either of the Americas, with all his works only in Spanish.
