

The Untold Truth about the Tulsa Race Riot and its Enduring Legacy - Uncovering America's Dark Past

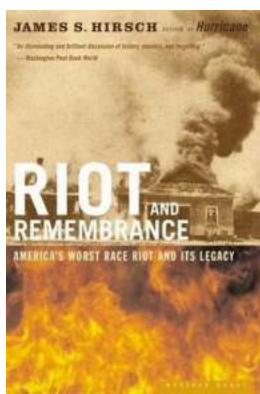

About the Tulsa Race Riot

On May 31, 1921, a false accusation against a black man named Dick Rowland, accused of assaulting a white woman in an elevator, sparked a chain of events that led to the devastating riot. A white mob gathered outside the courthouse, demanding Rowland to be handed over to them for lynching. A group of armed African-American men arrived to protect Rowland, leading to a confrontation between the two sides. The situation escalated into a full-blown riot.

The Tragic Events

Over the next two days, an estimated 10,000 white Tulsa citizens, backed by local authorities, attacked the Greenwood District. They looted, burned, and destroyed countless businesses and homes belonging to the African-American residents. The community was ruthlessly attacked from the ground and the air, with private planes dropping explosives on buildings.

The official reports stated that 36 people died during the riot, but it is widely believed that the death toll exceeded 300. The incident resulted in thousands of African-Americans losing their homes, businesses, and livelihoods. It was one of the deadliest acts of racial violence in American history.

The Aftermath and Concealment

The aftermath of the Tulsa Race Riot was devastating for the African-American community, both physically and emotionally. The survivors were left traumatized and faced tremendous challenges in rebuilding their lives. The incident was downplayed and systematically concealed for decades, with no official acknowledgment or reparations provided to the victims.

The efforts to bury the truth about the Tulsa Race Riot and its consequence came from various sources, including local authorities, community leaders, and historians. The information was omitted from history books, and eyewitness accounts were ignored or dismissed.

The Legacy and Ongoing Fight for Justice

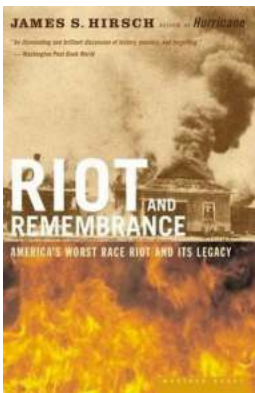

Only in recent years has the true extent and horror of the Tulsa Race Riot started to be widely acknowledged. Efforts have been made to excavate mass graves and identify the victims. The Tulsa Race Massacre Centennial Commission was established to educate the public about the event and work towards reconciliation and healing.

Moreover, the survivors and descendants of the Tulsa Race Riot victims have fought tirelessly for justice and reparations. They have demanded acknowledgment and compensation for the loss and suffering endured by their community. While progress has been made, it remains an ongoing struggle.

The Tulsa Race Riot was one of the darkest chapters in American history, revealing the deep-seated racial tensions and violence that plagued the country. The legacy of this event serves as a constant reminder of the need for justice, equality, and understanding among all races.

As the truth about the Tulsa Race Riot continues to come to light, it is crucial that we confront and acknowledge the past to ensure a more inclusive and equitable future. By educating ourselves and supporting the efforts of the survivors and descendants, we can help pave the way for lasting change and healing.

With a new preface, a "profound, chilling, and heartbreaking, contribution to American history" that investigates the causes of the twentieth century's deadliest race riot and how its legacy has scarred and shaped a community (Boston Globe).

On May 30, 1921, a misunderstanding between a white elevator operator and a Black delivery boy escalated into the worst race riot in U.S. history. In this compelling and deeply human account, James Hirsch investigates how the Tulsa riot erupted, how it was covered up, and how the survivors and their descendants fought for belated justice.

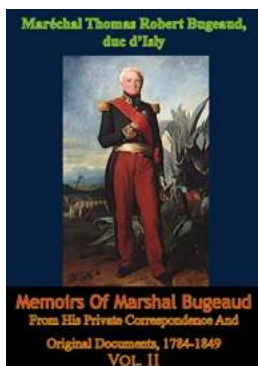

“Superbly researched and engagingly written” (Fort Worth Morning Star), Riot and Remembrance powerfully chronicles one community’s effort to overcome a horrific legacy, revealing how the segregation of history and memory affects all Americans a hundred years later.

“The best book yet on the Tulsa riots, and one that should be required reading.”—
Seattle Times
