A husband who isn't quite as he seems...

A young woman from a loving home, hoping to move on from desperate poverty...

A ranch hand with a secret past...

Laurel Johnson's family is poor, so poor that they can hardly put food on the table.

True enough, it is her father's own fault. His gambling debt just keeps spiraling upwards and out of control.

So, not only is there not enough money for food on the table. There is no man in town who would enter into a marriage agreement with Laurel for fear of taking on her father's debt.

With no prospects in her hometown, she sets off for Wyoming and marries handsome ranch owner, Brandon Harper.

But Brandon is not the person he appears to be?

Can Laurel deal with Brandon's abusive nature and make her marriage work?

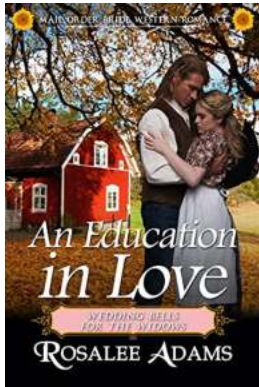

Or, will she be forced to take drastic measures just to survive?
