The Untouched Landscape

Through Nuttall's vivid descriptions, the journal offers readers a glimpse into the untamed wilderness of Missouri and Arkansas. The unspoiled beauty of the region, with its majestic forests, rolling prairies, and meandering rivers, unfolds before your eyes. Picture yourself standing on the edge of the vast Ozark Plateau, surrounded by endless greenery, as you absorb the serene silence of nature.

Meeting Native American Tribes

One of the most intriguing aspects of Nuttall's journey was his encounters with indigenous tribes. From the Osage to the Cherokee, Nuttall documented his interactions with Native Americans, shedding light on their rich cultures, traditions, and ways of life. The journal provides a unique perspective into the history and anthropology of the regions, allowing readers to grasp the essence of these vibrant communities.

Exploring Unique Flora and Fauna

As a botanist and ornithologist, Nuttall's primary purpose was to document the diverse plant and animal species he encountered during his expedition. His meticulous observations and illustrations serve as a comprehensive guide to the natural wonders of the region. From colorful wildflowers to rare bird species, the journal paints a vivid picture of Missouri and Arkansas's ecological diversity.

The Legacy of the Journal

The "Journal Of Tour Into The Interior Of Missouri And Arkansas 1818 1819" stands as an invaluable historical document that bridges the gap between the past and the present. Nuttall's exploration laid the foundation for future scientific research in the region, helping scholars and explorers gain insights into American history, culture, and the natural world. Journal of a Tour into the Interior of Missouri and Arkansaw 1818-1819 [transcribed and proofed in digital text], by Henry Rowe Schoolcraft. Originally published in 1821 for Sir Richard Phillips and Co. in Volume 5 of "New Voyages and Travels," London; containing 102 pages, now in the public domain.

A journal of the exploration of Henry Rowe Schoolcraft (1793-1864), and his traveling partner, Levi Pettibone (1780-1881), from Potosi, Missouri Territory, through the White River area in the Ozarks of Missouri and Arkansas, giving daily observations of the trip, the landscape, their hardships, and the people they met in this wild and mostly unsettled part of the country. Two poems by Schoolcraft are included; one unnamed, and "Transallegania," a fantasy about minerals, at the end of the journal. Spelling of place names are his own.

According to Schoolcraft's later works, parts of this journal had previously been published in "Belleslettres Repository," but this was apparently the first full publishing, and it was done in London. A different version, which omitted much of Schoolcraft's criticism of the Ozark people, was first published in America in 1851 in his "The American Indians, Their History Condition and Prospects, from Original Notes and Manuscripts," and in 1853 in his "Scenes and Adventures in the Semi-Alpine Region of the Ozark Mountains of Missouri and Arkansas."

This eBook has been completely transcribed, proofed and formatted for Kindle, and contains all of the original text.
