The future excites our imaginations. Many people seek out ways to find out what's going to happen to them both soon and far later; we even make movies about the world being destroyed. Any worldview system wide enough to shape a whole life has to answer the ultimate questions of both our beginnings and the far end of history.

God knows this and gives us solid answers to both, preparing us for the distant future and helping us shape our lives today. He even presented these answers in a way that has allowed all people in every place and time to benefit. But this means many of us find his predictions of what's coming confusing and scary.

This book walks us through the basic biblical texts and ideas to help untangle as many knots as possible, teaching us how to humbly, but boldly, learn to study our Bibles for ourselves. In this study we will take the far end of history in the same way biblical creationists take the beginning: at face value.

You will find this book a clear explanation of how futurist, premillennial, prewrath believers interpret the words of Scripture.
