Cade Swanson is a high school senior who has only one hope of leaving his awful life: art. On top of the stress of the school year, Cade has a lot to balance. His best friend ignores him every time she's in a relationship, his mom is working two jobs, he's raising his little brother, and he's trying to build a successful portfolio as an artist to win the state art show. The only stability in his life is his friend Isaiah.

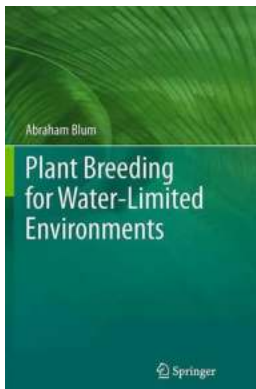

When Isaiah's mom helps Cade catch his first big break as an artist, he's swept away by success and starts to see the light at the end of the tunnel. As Cade's friendship with Isaiah starts to evolve, Isaiah complicates things by kissing him and rewriting the rules of their friendship.

Can Cade's senior year become any more confusing?
